Lehigh University’s Department of Accounting seeks an experienced accounting professional, for the non-tenure track position at the rank of Professor of Practice in Accounting. The initial appointment, starting fall, 2015, is for three years. The candidate should have significant practical experience and demonstrated success in high-level public accounting positions and substantial first-hand knowledge of U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles and Auditing Standards. The individual must have an undergraduate degree in business and a CPA license. Masters of Science or an equivalent graduate degree in Accounting is strongly preferred as the candidate may also teach graduate students. This is a non-tenure track position and carries no research requirements.

As a full-time position, the candidate is expected to be on campus full-time. The teaching load is four sections per semester or eight sections of different accounting courses during an academic year which typically runs from last week in August through third week in May. There is additional compensation for summer teaching. The ideal candidate should be able to teach a variety of courses in the undergraduate accounting program and related graduate programs in all accounting and auditing areas except federal taxation and accounting information systems. In addition, the individual is expected to contribute with service to the department, college and the university. Candidates should specify on their resumes any prior teaching experience and specific accounting courses that they have taught and/or are capable of teaching.

Qualified women and minority candidates are especially encouraged to apply. Salary is competitive. Lehigh offers excellent benefits including domestic partner benefits.
